NHL EXPANSION DRAFT SUMMARIES

Teams had three minutes to make each pick, with the orders of selection determined by drawing names from the Stanley Cup – the goaltenders were picked in one grouping (the Kings chose first) and skaters in another (the North Stars chose first). Five of those six franchises went on to win the Cup.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Terry Sawchuk (LAK): First goaltender selected

Dave Balon (MNS): First skater selected

Bernie Parent (PHI): Later won back-to-back Stanley Cups, Conn Smythe and Vezina Trophies w/ PHI

Glenn Hall (STL): Had just won Vezina Trophy (then awarded to goalies on team with fewest GA)

Al Arbour (STL): 4x Stanley Cup champion before selection; 4x Stanley Cup champion as head coach

Andy Bathgate (PIT): Held NYR franchise records for goals, assists & points before selection

Ed Van Impe (PHI): First pick by PHI; second captain in franchise history; 2x Stanley Cup champion w/ PHI

Order of selection was determined by the spin of a wheel. Punch Imlach, the first head coach and general manager in Sabres history, chose numbers between eight and 11 and the winning number was eight. Buffalo used its first pick in the expansion draft to select Tom Webster, whom they traded to Detroit to fulfill a pre-arranged deal that sent goaltender Roger Crozier to the Sabres.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Tom Webster (BUF): First skater selected

Dunc Wilson (VAN): First goaltender selected

Pat Quinn (VAN): Future Canucks head coach

Charlie Hodge (VAN): 6x Stanley Cup champion; first goalie selected in multiple expansion drafts (also 1967)

Phil Goyette (BUF): First skater selected in expansion draft after winning individual award in previous season

The Flames and Islanders entered the NHL's third expansion draft with a split of first-picks: Atlanta would get the first selection among goaltenders, and New York the first choice of skaters. Atlanta used its top selection to choose 23-year-old goaltender Phil Myre from the Canadiens, who left the netminder unprotected following a pre-arranged agreement orchestrated by Flames general manager Cliff Fletcher.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Phil Myre (AFM): First goaltender selected

Bart Crashley (NYI): First skater selected

Ed Westfall (NYI): Scored first goal in NYI history (in their first-ever game, against AFM)

Billy Smith (NYI): 4x Stanley Cup champion; most seasons for franchise after expansion draft selection (17)

1974-75

The League's fourth expansion draft in seven years saw the Scouts make the first selections among both goaltenders and skaters – something that hadn't yet occurred. A member of the Canadiens was picked with an opening selection for the fourth time as Kansas City chose goaltender Michel Plasse, who had won a Stanley Cup with Montreal one year earlier.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Simon Nolet (KCS): First skater selected

Michel Plasse (KCS): First goaltender selected

Ron Low (TOR): Future Stanley Cup champion (assistant coach) and NHL head coach

1979-80

Selections for skaters and goaltenders were combined into one expansion draft for the first time as four clubs from the World Hockey Association joined the NHL; Winnipeg selected first followed by Edmonton, Hartford and Quebec. Subsequent rounds followed a reverse order. The draft marked the NHL return of future Hockey Hall of Fame member Bobby Hull, who was selected by the Jets with the first pick of the third round after seven years in the WHA. As part of the agreement to bring the four WHA franchises into the NHL, the clubs established protected lists of up to two skaters and two goaltenders with the four clubs retaining those players as "Priority Selections." In total, 13 players were made "Priority Selections" including Wayne Gretzky and Mark Howe.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Peter Marsh (WIN): First player selected

Lindsay Middlebrook (WIN): First goaltender selected

Bobby Hull (WIN): Most NHL goals (604) among players claimed in an expansion draft; the oldest pick (age 40)

Colin Campbell (EDM): Future NHL head coach and League executive

1991-92

The NHL's sixth expansion draft was preceded by a dispersal draft which, as part of the arrangement that kept the North Stars in Minnesota and subsequently granted an expansion franchise for San Jose, permitted the Sharks to choose 24 players from Minnesota's roster. The dispersal draft was held the morning of May 30, 1991, followed that afternoon by the expansion draft in which San Jose used its first pick to make Jeff Hackett the only goaltender selected that year. Though not technically an expansion team, Minnesota chose Rob Ramage from the Maple Leafs with its first of 10 selections.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Jeff Hackett (SJS): First goaltender selected; started first game in franchise history

Rob Ramage (MNS): Most goals (10), assists (25), points (35) among D in season before expansion selection

David Babych (MNS): Most NHL points (561) among defensemen before an expansion draft selection

Guy Lafleur (MNS): Most NHL points (1,353) and games (1,126) among players claimed in an expansion draft

Tim Kerr (SJS): Ranked top-five in Flyers history for goals (3rd; 363) and points (5th; 650) before selection

OTTAWA SENATORS

1992-93

TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING

The NHL Entry Draft returned to Montreal after a three-year reprieve and so too did the NHL Expansion Draft, with selections made this time at the storied Montreal Forum after each of the first five events were held at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. Ottawa and Tampa Bay each selected 12 forwards, seven defensemen and two goaltenders, with 18 of 42 those picks appearing on opening-night rosters for each club's inaugural game less than four months later (nine for OTT, nine for TBL).

Notable Selections (all selections):

Peter Sidorkiewicz (OTT): First goaltender selected

Brad Shaw (OTT): First skater selected; ranked fourth on Senators with 41 points in inaugural season

Brian Bradley (TBL): Posted highest point total by an expansion selection in franchise's inaugural season (86)

Phase II allowed Ottawa, San Jose and Tampa Bay – clubs that each had played two or fewer seasons – to select up to two players total from the rosters of Anaheim and Florida. Only three players were selected in Phase II: Glenn Healy and Dennis Vial (picked by ANA) were claimed by the Lightning and Senators, respectively; the Lightning also claimed Daren Puppa (from FLA). The Sharks made no Phase II selections.

Notable Selections (all selections):

NASHVILLE PREDATORS

1998-99

The first NHL Expansion Draft held in-person in the United States saw the Predators, the first of four clubs joining the League over a three-year span, select one player from each of the other 26 active franchises. Regulations allowed the selection of two free agents, with Nashville choosing defenseman Uwe Krupp – who two years earlier had scored the Stanley Cup-clinching goal for Colorado – and goaltender Mike Richter – four years removed from a title with the Rangers. Neither player ended up in a Predators uniform, as Richter re-signed with New York within weeks of his selection – resulting in compensation to the Predators – and Krupp landed on the Red Wings.

Notable Selections (all selections):

Bob Boughner (NSH): Future NHL head coach

Al Iafrate (NSH): Most NHL goals (152) among defensemen before an expansion draft selection

Tomas Vokoun (NSH): Spent eight seasons with NSH and left as franchise leader in wins and games played

With the ability to select one player from each existing club other than the Predators – who entered the League the year prior – the Thrashers made agreements with various teams to avoid unprotected players such as Igor Larionov (DET) and Garth Snow (VAN).
